Asterisk Appliance™ Quick Start Guide

1. Unpack the box, and inspect the components.

The following components should be included:

- Asterisk Appliance™
- Compact Flash® Card
- Power Supply
- Power Cable
- Analog Cables (optional depending on model)
- CD-ROM containing manual & installation files
- Product Registration Card
- Support and Warranty Information

2. Remove compact flash cover plate and insert the Compact Flash® Card.

3. Connect one end of an Ethernet cable (not included) to an Appliance LAN port, and one end to an Ethernet connection on a computer configured to obtain an IP address automatically (DHCP). This step will connect your Appliance to your computer so that you may access the Asterisk Appliance. Refer to the photo of the Asterisk Appliance back panel for the location of the LAN ports.

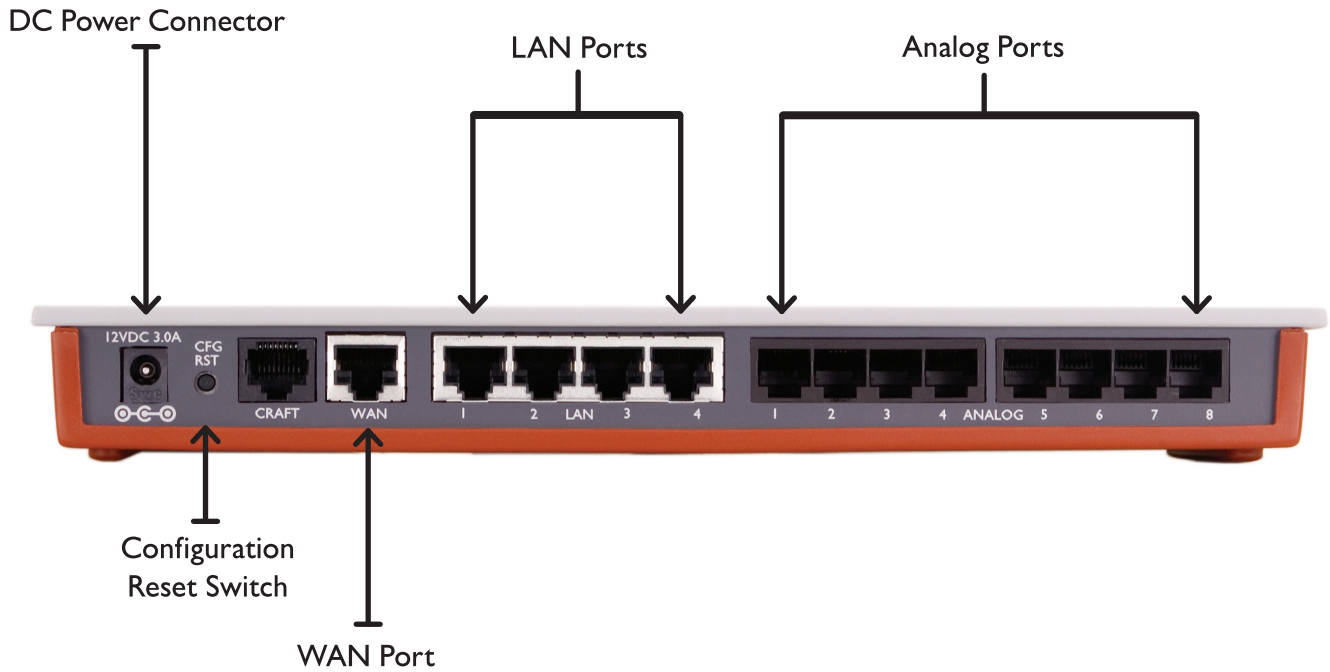

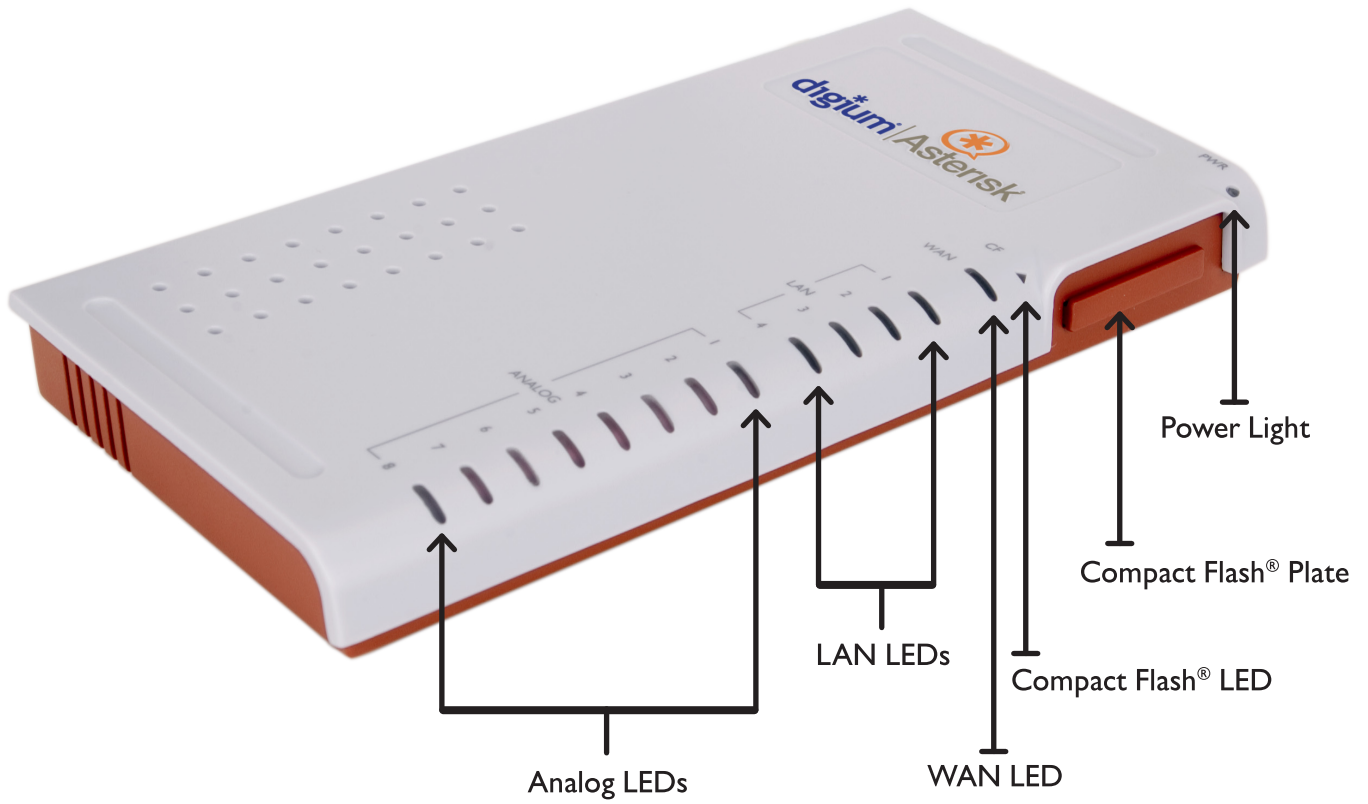

4. Connect the power cable to the power supply. Connect the provided power supply to the Appliance's DC power connector. The Appliance will immediately power on once connected to a power source.

5. Once the Appliance has powered up, a series of LEDs will illuminate. Analog LEDs which are green correspond to an FXS port. These are the ports you will connect to a telephone. Red LEDs correspond to an FXO port. You will connect your phone lines to FXO ports.

6. Open a browser window (Firefox is recommended) and enter the IP address for the Asterisk Appliance™. The default admin URL is <http://192.168.69.1> The default username is admin The default password is password

7. You are now ready to configure your Asterisk Appliance via the GUI. Follow the on-screen instructions in the setup wizard to get started.

Please refer to the complete Asterisk Appliance User Manual for detailed information. The manual is available from <http://www.digium.com>.
